... Taylor's efforts to internationalize its curriculum?

by Pamela Teo

There is a world out there that few people have had the opportunity to visit and appreciate. Taylor University will enable its students to learn about different cultures through organized trips or classes taught by professors whom the school has helped to go abroad.

Dr. Richard Parker's trip in the fall of 1987 to Japan, Kenya and Nigeria gave him a greater awareness of the contrast in cultures.

As a professor of music, Parker has developed a class he calls Music and World Cultures which will expose students to the music of the European, Asian and African cultures and various cultural areas including religion, social factors, historical considerations and learning processes.

"This course meets the general education cross cultural requirement; more importantly, however, it assists students in furthering their understandings of and ridding their ignorances about their surrounding world," said Parker.

Another professor who has recently returned from her journeys is Dr. Jessica Rousselow, professor of communication and theatre arts.

Rousselow spent her sabbatical visiting theatres and other performing arts such as dance and dance dramas and schools where artists were trained in these traditions in the Far East and Southeast Asia.

"I've learned that the aesthetic theory of these cultures grows out of a particular religious experience and notions about the world just as the western ones do. I've also learned just how much I don't know and how much I need to immerse myself in these cultures' philosophical traditions before I can even attempt to understand the aesthetic theory," Rousselow said.

She will be offering a course in eastern drama which will include segments in Japanese, Indian and Chinese drama and will be a cross-cultural course offered by the communications department.

A variety of personal and professional changes occurred to Dr. Gary Newton after he returned from his trip to Kenya the summer of 1988.

"My trip to Kenya has helped me to appreciate a culture that is radically different from ours. I came home with some difficult questions like 'How can a people that is poor materially be so rich spiritually?' " said Newton.

"My experiences taught me that we must be very careful not to identify western values with biblical values. Economic success cannot be equated with spiritual maturity," Newton added.

Newton, assistant professor of religion, is organizing a trip to Kenya in August 1989, with a group of six to eight students. This would give students an opportunity to teach and counsel young people in a different culture.

In the chemistry department, Drs. Stan Burden and Dan Hammond spent the summer of 1988 in the Dominican Republic with Margaret Coles, a medical technologist. She approached Burden for assistance in making refinements on a portable laboratory that is used in primitive situations. That experience has encouraged these professors to offer an opportunity to science students with health related skills to learn to use this equipment and to donate their abilities on these trips.

"Our hope would be that we would get undergrads to learn how to do this and to devote at least part of their career to this type of service whether over a summer or two or three years," Burden said.

Taylor University's vision has been supported by a grant from the J. Howard Pew Foundation, which it received through the Christian College Consortium. Perhaps, in time, this vision will expand to include more students.

Are you aware of...

... the "mods" in West Village?

by Ann Calkins

In the 1987 US News and World Report poll of top colleges, Taylor University was ranked as one of the best liberal arts colleges in the Midwest. The popularity of the school was reflected by an increase in the number of incoming freshmen for the 1988-89 school year. To accommodate this increase, Taylor University had to build West Village to add to the list of available temporary housing.

West Village consists of thirteen modular units located behind the Odle Gymnasium. Each unit houses seven students and there are altogether 91 students who live in these temporary residential facilities.

The "mods" as they have come to be called, are fully carpeted and include three double rooms and one single room along with two bathrooms and a small lounge area.

There are only two telephones in each unit and the mods are also equipped with central heating.

According to sophomore P.A. Alonzo Yarhouse, living in West Village has both advantages and disadvantages to regular residence or off-campus living.

"Living in West Village is like living in a house off-campus except that it is closer to the gymnasium and dining commons. Having lived in Fourth Gerig last year, I miss the lounge and the ability to socialize with both guys and girls from the different floors," said Yarhouse.

Another complaint is the safety of the mods because of their location and structure. Yarhouse relates the story of how a storm and strong winds caused some of the units to rock violently one November morning. Inhabitants of West Village had to be moved into the gymnasium at 2 a.m. and were allowed to move back to their units only when the storm abated at 4 a.m. This, however, has not been a recurrent problem.

Quiet and open house hours are the same for West Villagers as they are for other on-campus students, but as there is no lounge area for guys and girls to socialize during the week days, the P.A.'s found a way to get around this problem by taking turns to host an "open lounge" each week.

The "mods" of West Village will not be around next year. A new residential hall will be completed to accommodate the overflow of students. For some, West Village will not be missed very much, but for others, the memories of their "mod" days will be cherished forever.

...the purple and gold flying in the air?

Are you aware of...

by Debbie Foster

Flying flags were part of the pomp and pageantry of the 1988 Winter and Summer Olympics. In step with tradition, competing countries paraded around the track in Calgary and Seoul with their flags of different colors and symbols. Taylor could not have been represented in such a way if the sophomore class members had not decided that their school needed something to represent itself.

Theresa Veach, senior class vice-president and art education major, formed a committee of 12 members to formulate ideas in the fall of 1986. According to Veach, they encountered no problems in designing the flag.

"After a few meetings in the library we drew up some ideas and plans. We then looked in the encyclopedias for different designs and dimensions," indicated Veach.

The whole process of meeting, preparing designs and getting a final sample copy ready for presentation took about two weeks.

In the spring, Veach presented a sample of the flag to the National Alumni Council for approval. The council thought it was a great idea and that it signified tradition.

The assembly and purchase of the flag were accomplished by earning money through various fundraisers. The flag was manufactured over the summer and presented at the Homecoming Chapel in the fall of 1987.

Veach felt that having a flag was important because it was a symbol of school pride and that it gave true meaning to the school song.

"Our class wanted to give something special and unique to the school," Veach said.

The purple of the flag represents the world while the gold cross depicts the Taylor Christian community reaching out to the world. The torch reflects the calling of Taylor University students to be torch-bearers for Christ. It expresses the fact that we carry the light of good news to the four corners of the earth until Christ comes again.

As the flag is flying in the wind it portrays Taylor as more than just a school; it also illustrates what Taylor hopes to contribute to the world.

Purple background - the world in which we live. Gold cross - Taylor Christian community reaching out to the world. Purple cross - Christ is center of our lives, community and world. Globe and torch - the calling of Taylor University students to be torchbearers for Christ, carrying the Good News throughout the world until Christ comes again.

...the four seasons of Helena's past?

Are you aware of...

Just as the trees of the fall hold varied-colored leaves so did the Helena Memorial Building serve several purposes when she was completed in the fall of 1912. The man responsible for her completion was Merritt O. Abbey, who was then superintendent of maintenance at Taylor University.

After her completion, she was the home not only of the music department but served as a gymnasium and auditorium as well. There musicians received instruction, enjoyed all forms of music and diligently practiced for hours, while downstairs athletes trained for sports. The Shreiner Auditorium on the upper level brought all of the students together as they praised and worshipped God in the chapel services.

As fall comes to an end, the leaves wither away and the grass dies, leaving only remnants of what once was. On January 20, 1972, the Helena building met her winter when a faulty wiring between the second ceiling floor and roof caught fire and set the building in flames. She burned to the ground taking organs, grand pianos and an electronic control system with her.

In the spring of 1973, the Helena building thawed from her winter state and became the Little Theatre Building where she housed the art department and hosted dramatic performances. Within her walls were heard the lines of actors and actresses rehearsing day after day for each upcoming performance. When that night came, Helena resounded with applause as the young stars received their reward for their diligent work.

by Kathi Strong

Her role as the hub of artistic endeavors came to halt when she experienced her second "ordeal." On August 19, 1986, the Helena building again burst into flames, this time in the hands of an arsonist. Only the Little Theatre which occupied the upper level of the building was destroyed; all the costumes, props and production equipment were lost.

From music and sports to drama and art, Helena now serves Taylor University in a different capacity. After a year of reconstruction which began last summer, she is now the home of admissions, as well as the president's and provost's offices.

Perhaps if Helena could speak she would share with us the experiences during those four seasons of her past. Today she stands strong and stately, emanating a sense of having persevered all weathers imaginable, easily becoming a symbol of permanence.

..the migration of students off-campus?

"Off-campus living is being one step closer to home. I'm really enjoying the 'almost -home' atmosphere in the apartment that I share with three other girls," said Jeri Daubenmeier, a senior who lives in Fairlane apartments.

When the number of enrollment at Taylor University increased for the 1988-89 school year, approximately 17%, or 282 members of the student body, which consisted mostly of juniors and seniors, moved off campus to make room for the large freshmen class. For many, the move has been a positive one and students have found that living off campus provides them with the convenience and privacy residence halls cannot provide.

An example of this is the availability of the kitchen to students who like to be creative with their meals. This makes entertaining a privilege that most off-campus students relish. Visitors, especially those of the opposite sex, can spend longer hours in the apartments, though there are still curfews that need to be observed. For some, studying is made easier because of the quiet atmosphere of the apartments, but for others it is just as hard or perhaps even harder than living in the dorms.

The need to share responsibilities is something that all off-campus students have to deal with, such as cleaning the bathrooms, washing the dishes and dividing up the phone bill.

One of the complaints that students have is the difficulty of getting to know more new students, although they have many off-campus friends.

"I know so few freshmen. Except for classes and one meal a day, I just don't come into contact with them," said Chad Massey, a dweller of Casa Patricia.

He added that off-campus students should take the initiative to socialize with the students in on-campus housing.

The term "off-campus" used to bring to mind the image of distance and isolation but now with more students of the same class moving off together that image has been dispelled.

...The Hurl, Space Grip and Palm Tree?

by Debbie Foster

As you come into campus from the eastern main entrance and drive by Sammy Morris Hall, you will soon find yourself staring straight into a black mass of twisted concrete tipped on one of its corners. If you happen to choose the other direction and drive by the Nussbaum Science Center, you will eventually see looming before you a large form resembling a jungle gym at a playground. However, if you decide to drive by Taylor Lake, you will be confronted by yet another structure, a steel pole with rings around it.

These three new art pieces are sculptures that Craig Moore, professor of art, acquired for Taylor University at no cost from Sculpture Chicago. He was also responsible for finding a way to transport them from Chicago to Upland.

"The Hurl" by Richard Tucker, Manchester, Mich., is located at the northeast corner of the campus. It weighs six tons and is a twisted column of welded steel and concrete. The form is twisted to represent a column which has been broken off and hurled into the air, landing on its corner. Tucker is known for his architectural column design and "The Hurl" is his largest work.

"Space Grip" by Robert Sestok, Detroit, Mich., is located southeast of Taylor's main entrance. This piece weighs three tons and is a 22-foot tall abstract welded steel fist. According to Bruce Campbell, part-time art professor, the appreciation of this art comes from noticing the shifting of shapes and forms as one moves along the S-curve of the road.

"The Flexing of Florida,

Part I" by Robert Machin, Chicago, Ill., is located on the southwest side of campus by the dining commons. Commonly known as the "Palm Tree" by Taylor students, the sculpture is 40 feet high and made from copper and galvanized pipe. the artist obtained his ideas from the state of Florida.

"The rings could represent the rings from the space shuttle, the green could represent the salt water or salt air and the galvanized steel could represent the trunk of the tree," indicated Campbell.

Since their arrival in the fall of 1988, these new sculptures have been received with mixed emotions. Some students feel that the sculptures do not fit in with the campus, while others appreciate their presence.

According to Steve Baarandse, junior art/English major, "These sculptures are a definite asset to the Taylor campus as they represent the fact that Taylor is keeping up with the times. It is an act of bringing culture to a place of learning."

Baarandse also added that the reason students have negative feelings toward these sculptures is that they do not take the time to understand them.

These sculptures have been the closest experience of art and culture for many students. For some it has been a positive experience, for others a negative one. However, regardless of how they have reacted to them, Taylor University has shown that it is appreciative of modern art.

Are you aware of...

...new dimensions in D.C. dining?

by Pamela Teo

Ever wondered why short ribs of beef are served on Mondays and not on Tuesdays? The reason is that the dining commons works on a four-week corporate menu designed by Restaura, a food service company and a subsidiary of Greyhound corporation.

"The corporate cycle menu lists four or five entrees and we decide which ones to serve for lunch and dinner," said Jerry Nelson, director of food services.

"After the fourth week it then starts with week one again, but this time we try to have an item which was not served four weeks ago so that students won't have the same choices," Nelson continued.

The dining commons has ventured slightly away from these corporate menus by introducing the Mexican, Italian and Oriental Nights on certain days of the week. These menu additions had to be approved by the corporation before they were started. As Nelson indicated the dining commons has a responsibility to not only come up with its own creations but also to try to be a part of the corporation and institute their promotions.

An example of these promotions is the "Count Down to Wellness" program which is designed to help students who are conscious of their health. The dining commons keeps students informed of their daily caloric intake by displaying the nutritional value of a simple basic meal. Students were also given a calorie counter which advises them on how much exercise is needed to burn-off the food they have consumed. A "Healthful Harvest" entree, a low calorie, low sodium meal, has also been introduced to provide students with a dieter's alternative.

Some students have wondered why the money for missed meals cannot be refunded. According to Nelson, students are helping each other out by buying into the three-meal program which is budgeted on an average number of student meals.

With its present budget, the dining commons has been able to acquire a yogurt machine, a sundae bar and a variety of other breakfast foods for the morning meal. Furthermore, it has obtained several new drinks and sodas.

Being well-fed is a road to good health and happiness, and the dining commons is aware of this. Provision does not seem to be the only responsibility it has assumed, but also a responsibility to provide creatively.

ACTIVITIES

An inner and outer awareness... that's the theme for this year's yearbook which is portrayed in the cover design; the eye represents awareness while the head and globe signifies being aware of one's immediate surroundings and the world.

Our college years are supposed to be the best years of our lives. They are a time of having an "inner awareness" of our campus community and thereby contributing and participating in it and also a time of gaining an "outer awareness" of things beyond the confines of Taylor through the exposure that we gain in our education.

This is what the Ilium would like to do for you this year -- attempt to chronicle some of the more important and interesting campus occurrences while capturing world events that made 1988-89 unique. So sit back and recapture those moments as you flip through these Activities pages that are filled with memories that brought you joy and laughter.

Activities, Activities, Activities...

Creativity. Originality. Detail. Heart-and-soul. These words describe some of what Taylor students put into the countless hours of preparation for such activities as Nostalgia Night, Airband, Variety Show, pick-a-dates, open-house, Spirit Week, Homecoming, Taylathon, Youth Conference, plays, pranks and intramurals, as well as many, many others. So why all the hard work? It's because in our small community we have chances to work closely with other individuals in various contexts. Through each encounter, we establish a precedent which is often carried over into other areas of our lives. Through each experience, the awareness achieved becomes a platform on which we build, creating a comprehensive continuum which we know as "life." What all that means is this: whether you're choreographing a song from the hippie era, racing a bike, or even cleaning a stage, your effort counts.

S.A.C Concert Series

Music is the medium of moods, motives, and movement. Music is the communicating art of many in our culture today. It can stir memories, evoke emotions, and sometimes encourage those who have not signed the "Life Together" statement to dance. However, not all music reinforces the ideals which we uphold as Christians. In fact, some songs can be extremely discouraging. The alternative and/or relief for many is Contemporary Christian Music. Taylor's Student Activities Council recognizes and caters to this need each year by presenting a Fall and Spring Concert Series. This year, concert coordinator Chad Emery, senior, helped bring such acts as Bryan Duncan, Allies, David Meece, First Call, Whiteheart, Christian Stephens, Steve Camp, Larry Norman, and Kenny Marks to the Taylor stage.

Below - Bryan Duncan performs with the Allies at Taylor University Friday, September 16, 8:15 p.m.

When a Taylor woman gets engaged, she participates in a ritual called a "ring down" which entails the participation of the entire hall. A lighted candle with the engagement ring is passed around a pre-selected circle of girls until the bride-to-be decides to reveal her identity by blowing it off. Above - (L-R) Lisa Moritz, junior, passes the candle to the next girl to keep the women of English hall guessing. Yvonne Morrow, senior, and Stephanie Summers, sophomore, form part of the circle. Homecoming

Homecoming 1988 was a time when alumni and students, through activities, brought Taylor's past and present together. The weekend's main theme was "Tradition, today and tomorrow."

Jeff Jacobson, senior and Kristie Kuhnle, junior were co-chairpersons for Homecoming Weekend. "The alumni are the tradition, the students are the today and together we will build the tomorrow," Jacobson said.

Remembrance Day was presented Friday night with performances by both alumni and students. The students performed selections from Nostalgia Night, Variety Show and Airband.

The crowning of the Homecoming king and queen, Joel Durkovic, senior and Dana Deacon, senior, culminated the evening of remembrance.

Saturday was filled with activities such as the alumni brunch, a Homecoming 5K run/walk, the "Bell Tower Barbecue" and the annual Bell Tower Classic. The Taylor Trojans also defeated Aurora College 31-20 that afternoon.

The weekend closed with a Homecoming Worship service on Sunday. The featured speaker was Dr. Larry Helyer, professor of religion and the 1988 Distinguished Professor of the year.

The week that preceded Homecoming weekend, known as Spirit Week, was also packed with Taylor spirit and activities. Freshmen had to take part in matriculation throughout the week. One of the things that they had to do was to wear a paper plate around their necks which contained various information about themselves. Other Spirit Week activities included couples' softball, a food fest in the dining commons, a golf tournament and the Airband competition.

Parents' Weekend

Top - Tami Fuhrman, senior, and her proud parents.

Hugs, kisses, care packages and going out for "real food" were only a part of Parents' Weekend 1988.

The weekend started out with a chapel message on Friday Oct. 7, by President Jay Kesler, who paralleled our relationship to our heavenly Father with our relationship to our earthly father and mother.

A majority of parents started arriving later in the afternoon and were given a complimentary book, Family Forum, authored by President Kesler, as they registered. The Taylor University cookbook entitled Uncommon Dining, was also sold at the registration tables throughout the weekend. Each cookbook cost about $10 and the amount collected went to the student assistance fund.

Later that evening, the Taylor concert band and the Taylor Sounds, performed for visiting parents. The band, directed by Professor Albert Harrison, assistant professor of music, performed Variations on a Korean Folk Song and Second Suite. Taylor Sounds, directed by Dr. Jerry Giger, chairman of the music department, sang songs such as Amazing Grace, Take the Name of Jesus, and a calypso tune, Shut De Do.

The speaker for the annual prayer breakfast on Saturday was the Rev. Roland Coffey, Southeast Regional Director of Le-Tourneau Ministries International. His son, John Coffey, a Taylor student, was killed this past summer in a motorcycle accident. Coffey spoke on Christian parenting in times of a crisis.

The parents' association craft sale followed the Sunday breakfast. Many of the crafts were donated by parents of Taylor students and all money received from the sale went toward the student assistance fund.

Sporting events dominated the rest of the afternoon. It was Taylor against Tri-State University in soccer where Taylor emerged the winner after senior Joel Durkovich's first-half goal.

Football was also on the agenda. The Taylor Trojans defeated Rose-Hulman Institute 21-10. It was a come from behind win as the Trojans were down 10-0 at the half. During halftime the 1948-1951 Taylor football team was recognized.

Beverly Rinaldi and Buddy Green performed in concert for students and their families that Sunday evening. Rinaldi in her operatic style sang both sacred and secular selections. Greene performed, as would be expected, with his harmonica. He played different styles of music from different regions of the country and the world.

Finally, as Parents Weekend came to a close, President Kesler gave the Sunday morning worship message to a packed chapel. The worship theme for the morning was "God is our father, all-wise and unconditionally loving." President Kesler's message compared a shepherd caring for his flocks to God caring for his people.

As Sunday afternoon approached, so was it also time to bid farewell to parents and family--until Thanksgiving.

Spiritual

Renewal

Spiritual Renewal Week is an uplifting, challenging and sometimes hectic week that is provided for Taylor students in the fall and spring semesters. The week helps students focus on God as well as provide practical advice for common relationship problems.

From Monday, Sept. 12 to Friday, Sept. 16, Ron Hutchcraft, current head of Campus Life high school and junior high programs in New Jersey and New York, was the guest speaker. The theme for the week was "Beyond Rhetoric to Reality: How to graduate from Christian vocabulary to Christian reality."

Throughout the week Hutchcraft gave many practical insights into the Christian life and how to apply them in the outside world. Some of his topics included "Beyond Casual Character—staying in Mint Condition", "Beyond Spectators—The Safety Beyond Security" and "Beyond Mediocrity." He also spoke on the dedication Christians need for pure Christian life and talked further on this subject in terms of dating and marriage.

Hutchcraft has a long history of being involved with Youth for Christ and Campus life and has served as executive vice president for YFC/USA. He was also area director for the group in the Northeast and was an award-winning contributing editor to Campus Life magazine.

The speaker for the 1989 spring session of Spiritual Renewal Week was Dr. Bill Gilham who used his casual appearance and easy going manner to give students a different approach to the week. His theme was "Victorious Christian Living."

Taylor students learned about "earth suits" and "stuck feelers" as Gilham used creative analogies to present his main slogan—"God makes no provision for changing YOUR life. He only makes provision for living His life through you." The week centered on the individual and its search for true identity in Christ and how to allow Christ to express His life through us in order that we might do his will on earth. Like Hutchcraft, Gilham spoke on relationships, specifically, how the influence of our parents affects our personality.

Gilham received his doctorate in education from Oklahoma State University and has a long list of occupational experiences; he was a public school teacher and administrator, a member of the Oklahoma Education Association Staff and an associate professor of psychology at Southeastern Oklahoma State University.

Both speakers were brought to Taylor by a grant from the Staley Distinguished Christian Scholar Lecture Program.

Variety Show

Wally Campbell reigned over Variety Show '88 as Mizpah (the men of Third Morris) tried to make his princess smile. Campbell did double duty as host of the show and Mizpah's king for the evening while trying to make the girl he falls in love with in Taylorland to smile.

Wing participation dominated the show at 8:15 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 26, as the fifteen-act performance began with First West Wengatz performing "Runaround Sue." First South English got together next to act out the song So Long, Farewell from the musical The Sound Of Music. Third Morris asked that Taylor girls, Don't Be Cruel.

Although the audience enjoyed Mark Nevil and Stephanie Wilson in their performance of Can't We Try in an effort to make the princess happy, she obviously did not.

Bohemian Ballet was comically performed by "three guys" as the quest for a smile continued. Even a rendition of O Sifuni Mungu and Dirk Rowley and Friends' performance of The Ugliest Girl In The World could not bring the princess happiness.

As the first half of the program ended, the audience looked forward to the arrival of Dr. Fred Shulz as the "Phantom Of The Opera", and Lance Brookshire along with the core band petitioned the king to Wait for an extraordinary act. Even after Marc Plastow helped the audience understand his "Brick Layer" skit and Bill Ford belted out Summer of '69, the princess' smile was still not forthcoming.

The audience's suspicion that perhaps the princess was incapable of smiling was born out as Ridin' the Storm Out, and Rinderella were performed much to the princess' boredom and dislike. Doug Hull's performance of You're Special To Me, and Trout House's rendition of Bad Case Of Lovin' You rounded out the evening's acts.

Performin Series

The Performing Artist Series gave Taylor University students a taste of music from other cultures and time periods.

The first concert of the year was Gershwin by Request, performed by pianists Leon Bates and Wayne Sanders, bass-baritone Benjamin Matthews and soprano Eddy Pierce Young on October 22. The concert featured Gershwin's famous works such as Rhapsody in Blue, Fascinatin' Rhythm, Strike Up the Band, I Got Rhythm and selections from Porgy and Bess.

The series continued Nov. 4 with the Stockholm Arts Trio. The group consisted of Dan Almgren, violinist, Stefan Bojsten, pianist, and Torleif Thedeen, cellist. Since their debut in 1986, the group has given concerts in Sweden and abroad. The Trio performed Allegro con brio, by Beethoven, Brahms Allegro moto agitato, and This Scherzo is a Joke, by Ives.

As Christmas vacation approached, a musical of the classic movie It's a Wonderful Life was featured. Based on the 1947 Frank Capra motion picture which starred Jimmy Stuart, the musical retained all of the film's charm but added 18 songs composed by Thomas Sharkey, a Chicago composer-lyricist.

Some of these songs included The Christmas Crush, You're a Frustrated Man, The Baily Walk, and It's a Wonderful Life.

The a capella group Quink was the Performing Artist Series Valentine's treat for students, faculty and staff on Feb. 11 in the Rediger Auditorium. Since their debut in 1978, the 5-member group has rapidly captured a place on the international concert platforms. and has a repertoire consisting mainly of Renaissance, Baroque, Romantic, Impressionistic, and contemporary music.

During their concert at Taylor they performed French songs such as "Mille Regrets", which interprets a young man's love for his shepherdess, and "Le Chant des Oiseaux", which symbolizes birds singing to wake up the god of love. They also performed "Revoici Venir du Printemps", which was a reaction by Claude Lejeune, composer, to the traditional counter point style. The song brought the homophonic rhythmic scene which showed differences between long and short syllables.

The Chicago Staff Band, representing the Salvation Army, closed the Performing Artist Series on April 15 with a program designed to instruct and inspire both musician and listener.

The band was composed of officers, staff and laymen from the Army's central territory headquarters and metropolitan Chicago and has one purpose—to honor God through the ministry of the Salvation Army.

The Chicago Staff Band was founded in 1907 and is the second staff band to be formed in the United States. It made its first overseas trip in 1914, and since then has performed extensively in the United States, Canada as well as Great Britain.

World

Opportunities

Week

WOW is an expression often associated with surprise and elation. However, it is also the abbreviated form of Taylor's missions conference officially known as World Opportunities Week. W.O.W seeks to challenge the Taylor community to live out Christ's mandate to GO, whether here in our own country or across the world. By hosting this week-long missions conference, W.O.W provides easy access to various mission organizations offering short and long-term opportunities in the U.S. and abroad.

The theme for W.O.W this year was "Go the Second Mile." With a reference to one of Jesus' parables, this theme implies extending your reach beyond your comfort zone. It's a challenge to learn to rely on God's resources, pressing on in spite of difficulties and opposition, keeping your eyes focused always on the Lord. In a sense, it is a way of placing yourself in the context of the world and reacting "not out of selfish ambition or vain conceit," but with the altruistic compassion of Christ.

The speakers for W.O.W. included Samuel Stephens, an Indian national who has helped develop the Indian Gospel League that works with evangelism, church planting, child care and medicine; Tony Compolo, professor of Eastern College and founder of the Evangelical Association for the Promotion of Education (EAPE), and Jim Wilson, general director for Youth for Christ International in Singapore.

These speakers, each in their own distinctive way, along with mission representatives, a lot of hard work and prayer, and many blessings from God all combined, presented opportunities for service, a time of worship and praise, and the powerful challenge to "Go the Second Mile."

The King and I

The musical, The King and I, was truly a puzzlement as the impressive cast, crew, orchestra and directing staff of over 100 people participated in bringing a night of enchantment from Bangkok, Siam to the Taylor University theater stage. The show opened over the weekend of November 18-20 and was the largest theatrical production in the history of Taylor.

Preparation for the musical took two months, from the selection of the cast and crew to the building of the set. Putting up the Rodgers and Hammerstein's musical was a campus-wide effort. Dr. Ollie Hubbard, professor of communication arts, assisted by Valerie Flower, junior, directed and designed the set. Dr. Albert Harrison, associate professor of music, conducted the 30-member orchestra and Dr. Jerry Giger, also associate professor of music, assisted in choral direction.

The spotlight, however, was on Jack Lugar, sophomore and Jenny Dickinson, senior. Dickinson played the role of Anna Leonowens, the English governess who is hired by the King of Siam, played by Lugar, to teach his children and favorite wives. Upon her arrival in Siam, Anna is denied the house that the king had promised to give her when she agreed to come under his employ. Although upset, she is taken by his good heart and kind intentions and becomes his advisor in diplomatic affairs.

Other members of the cast included Jonathan Griffin as Anna's son, and Eddie Judd as the young Prince Chululongkorn. Lady Thiang, the Prince's mother and the King's most respected wife, was played by Gretchen Burwick. Sir Edward Ramsey, the visiting British diplomat and Anna's admirer was played by Guy Lowry. Playing the role of the Burmese girl who was given as a gift to the King was Michelle Leverenz. A total of twenty-three Taylor students participated in the play. In addition, two residents from the Upland community, Carol Tropsf, a school teacher and Kevin Whitmore, an assistant youth pastor who played Lun Tha, Tuptim's lover, contributed to the play. Twenty-five children of faculty members and the community contributed their efforts by playing the roles of the royal offsprings.

Upland, Ind., the town where Taylor University is situated was at one time a more active and thriving community.

It was first established in 1867 as a stopping place for the Pennsylvania Railroad but with the discovery of gas in 1888 brought more activity to the town as visitors from miles came to view the awesome discovery. Four years later, the cornerstone of Taylor University's administration building was laid, marking the beginning of a great institution.

During its hey-day, Uplanders used to attend band-concerts, tentshows and dog and pony acts on Friday and Saturday nights. Over the summer months, they even had the chance to enjoy the ever popular Rodeo shows that used to come to town.

Even though there may not be as many businesses in Upland now as there once were, Taylor students have come to rely heavily on those businesses that remain. When a group of students gets together and decides to throw a party, they know that they can count on Cook's to provide all the pop and munchies they will need.

Upland Drug Store is also stocked with the many necessities a college student may run out of. If the occasion calls for flowers, Taylor students know they can count on Country Flowers to give them just what they are looking for. And, of course, if Taylor students just want to spend time with their friends over a shake, they know that Ivanhoe's is the perfect place.

Although the Upland community has changed in many ways, it still plays an important role in the lives of Taylor students.

They make their connection by visiting high schools around the area and talking to kids about Christ as well as encouraging them to participate in Campus Life activities.

About 70 students from Taylor University are concerned enough about high school students to invest 10-15 hours a week of their time sharing God's love with them. These students work in eight different groups of "staffs", seven of which minister to high-school age students while the other ministers to junior high students.

One of the activities that they plan is known as "club"—a time of sharing, which is held once a week at a student's home. Skits, games and a short talk on a pertinent topic is what is involved during this evening.

"Superclub" is held once a month where all of the "staffs" get together for a time of fun and games.

Other special events that are planned include overnights, scavenger hunts and the annual spring-break trip to Florida, an event which entails some fundraising projects like selling candy, pizzas, and an all-night rollerthon.

Although Taylor students do the bulk of the planning themselves, they are guided by Bill Shewan, the Central Indiana director for Campus Life, Becky Jones and Kevin McDonald who function as the coordinators for the staff at Taylor University.

As coordinators, Jones and McDonald are responsible for the financial aspects of Campus Life. Also, once every other week each staff member meets with Jones or McDonald to discuss the kids and to get suggestions for "club".

In addition, once a week each staff holds a meeting to plan activities, make posters, come up with new ideas for skits and delegate duties for the upcoming club. However, a significant amount of this time is spent praying for the kids and the schools.

A lot of time is spent for the sake of the students, but these efforts yield the benefits of friendships, becoming role models, and quality time spent in encouragement and support.

Campus Life is a major link between Taylor and high school students. It involves planning, organization, and dedication, and the difference it makes can last an eternity.

Imagine a cloudy day, with a light drizzle falling. The city streets are crowded as you walk up and down London's crowded streets. People are bustling from here to there, hurrying along their way. Now imagine yourself in this picture, taking part in the hustle and bustle of London's hectic life. That's exactly what 27 Taylor students did in January of 1989.

These students participated in the English department's annual Literary London excursion. They spent 22 nights in the great city of London, visiting famous sites that most people only dream of seeing. Most would agree that it was an opportunity of a lifetime. These students, along with two ladies associated with the Taylor housekeeping staff, flew out of the Cincinnati airport on January 3 and returned to the same airport on January 27. They were in London for the same period of time that the interterm classes at Taylor were taking place.

While in London, the group stayed at a Moslem-owned hotel, Lancaster Court, in Hyde Park, London. During the mornings, they attended class sessions, taught by Dr. Fry, who accompanied the group to London. The classes were studies on five famous British authors: Geoffrey Chaucer, Dr. Samuel Johnson, T.S. Eliot, Charles Dickens, and William Shakespeare. Most of their evenings and all of their weekends were free for the students to go on their own private excursions into the city. Among other things, the students used this time to shop, attend musicals, and visit some of the local hot spots. One weekend, 24 of the 29 participants went across the Channel to Paris. When asked about the group, Dr. Fry commented on how impressive the group was; "This was one of the most congenial groups I've ever been with. They were remarkably compatible and cooperative and pleasant to be with." He was also impressed with their creative ability to utilize their freetime fully. Some of the places the group visited were the homes of Dr. Johnson and Dickens, and Shakespeare's birth place and grave. They also visited Canterbury, which is the locale of Chaucer's pilgrims in his Canterbury Tales. They spent time in the British Museum as well as the National Gallery. They also had the opportunity to view several plays and musicals including Les Miserables, Richard III, and The Phantom of the Opera, which the students treated Dr. Fry to as a sign of appreciation.

"The one thing I enjoyed this time was to see the Cabinet War Rooms of Churchill," commented Dr. Fry. "While I have done London many times before, I'd never been able to see that before." The War Rooms were preserved to look like they did when Churchill used them in the Second World War. This was the first time the rooms were open to visitors during Dr. Fry's many trips to London. That made this excursion a very special one for him.

Lighthouse

Bahamas

During the fall semester, several groups of students met every Monday for two hours to prepare for their Lighthouse trips to the Bahamas, Jamaica, England and Germany. The first hour of the session was spent in discussion with Pastor Bob Griffin while the second hour was spent brushing up on their music, skits and puppet shows.

A group of ten students went to Nassau, Bahamas, from Dec. 28 - Jan. 24, to reach out to the people there. The team was led by sponsors Chuck and Shirley Moore, missionaries with Wycliffe Bible Translators. The group stayed at Joy Bible Camp, which was located away from the city. There they cooked their own meals and did their own laundry.

The mission trip consisted mainly of performances in schools and churches. In elementary schools they used puppets to get the message across; J.T. was the main puppet used to teach children about the fruits of the spirit. In high school and in churches, the team also performed skits and gave individual testimonies. Generally, the skits dealt with the fruits of the spirit and having a personal commitment to God. They also stressed the need for everyone to spread the good news to others.

At the end of the trip the team witnessed 15 commitments to Christ.

The Jamaica Lighthouse team went to Jamaica in January as a spiritual uplifter but found themselves being uplifted instead.

They spent their time singing, performing dramas, putting on puppet shows and giving their testimonies in various churches and schools in the area of St. Mary's. John Hein, sophomore, Brian Crabtree, freshman and Mark Sweeting, junior also took turns in presenting the sermon in the Sunday worship services.

The team stayed at the home of John and Marsha Bradey, who are missionaries on the island. They concentrated a large part of their ministry on the children of Jamaica. Kristie Plaggemars, junior, and many others on her team enjoyed the attention they were able to give to the children; "They really loved being around us," she said.

The people of Jamaica also had a great effect on the team-members.

"My favorite part was going to the churches and seeing how on fire the people were for God," commented Stephanie Taggart, sophomore.

"It really encouraged me," she said.

Although the Jamaican team did not see many lives come to Christ, they had a chance to enjoy the fellowship of other believers, and experience the bond that only Christ can bring.

"I never saw an unhappy Jamaican," Taggart recalls. "It's hard to believe we were there and are back already, and that it's already over," she added.

Lighthouse

England

The England Lighthouse team was just one of the many groups that went out into the world this past interterm to teach people the message of Jesus Christ.

The team, lead by Pastor Bob Griffin and Becky House, consisted of 10 students.

The group traveled to Birmingham, England where they stayed throughout the month of January. The students stayed with families of Riverside Fellowship Church.

The first week of their trip was orientation and they had their first performance on Sunday at Riverside Fellowship.

Some performances were held at Lea Mason school. They did 15 minute to half hour performances, of music, drama and testimonies. After their performances they split up into small groups to talk one-on-one with from one to five kids. In the small group, the four spiritual laws were shared and prayers took place.

The team also went to an all girls' home and a retirement home to perform.

One day a youth rally was held for about 200-250 kids at Park Hill School.

Sharing at pubs, churches, the city centre and door-to-door were also a part of their mission.

Each student was paired up with a member of "Freestyle." This is a group for college-age people from all over the world who prayed, worshipped and went door-to-door with Taylor students.

Throughout the trip 30 people made commitments to Christ. After someone made a commitment, a team member would pray with them, give them a Bible and show them some verses.

Ray Fellows, a religion teacher at Lea Mason, invited the kids to church and to a Bible study to make sure they are sticking to their commitment. Team members also write and keep in touch with the children.

As most mission trips do, this one changed the lives of the children; it also changed the lives of the team members. The trip illustrated the need for Christians to get out of their comfort zone and to share. Some students found out that when you share, God blesses your obedience. They also learned that God is faithful when you let Him work through you.

When they weren't sharing the Lord, the students traveled around England and saw some of the sights.

The England Lighthouse team reaches out to the world and will continue to do so in the years to come.

West Germany became the latest destination of Taylor's Lighthouse program as twelve sophomores and juniors accompanied by faculty adviser, Dr. Bill Heth, travelled to the European nation during interterm. The team arrived to find a clean, friendly, historic yet thoroughly modern country. The team's journeys centered in southern Germany where they were able to see, visit and experience such cities, sights and events as Frankfurt, the scenic Rhine River Valley, the famous Heidelberg Castle, shopping in Schweinfurt and Ansbach and a ski weekend with junior high students in the German Alps at Berchtesgaden,

However, the highlight of the group's trip was the time spent with American junior and senior high youths at the military bases in Germany with the "Club Beyond" program. The mission of this program is to work with the military Chaplaincy on each respective base to provide Christian and non-Christian students with opportunities for fun, fellowship, and to introduce them to Jesus Christ.

The team presented programs of music, games and drama to thirteen such groups as well as spending an exciting three-day weekend with two hundred of the junior high kids.

The three-week trip ended with a weekend debriefing period in Reutte, Austria. The team had time to reflect on their individual and group experiences and to wind down after a hectic schedule.

As Bill Schureman, junior, put it, "The experience was truly life-changing for me, and I believe for the other team members as well. I gained a greater realization of how God loves and is in control of people all over the world, and I especially learned how to show love better."

While David Duke, a former Ku Klux Klan leader, was being elected into the Louisiana legislature this past February, Taylor University featured a comedy about southern bigotry and students began to understand the prejudices surrounding anyone who is not a white Anglo-Saxon Protestant.

Charlie Baker (Jim Church), learns the art of communication in Larry Shue's intriguing play, The Foreigner, when his friend, "Froggy" LeSuer (Steve Barron) tries to help him get over his shyness and depression.

Under the direction of Dr. Oliver Hubbard, the play begins as Froggy takes Charlie to his favorite resort, his friend Betty Meek's (Beth Kroger) fishing lodge, where he introduces Charlie as a foreigner who cannot speak any English.

The situation is complicated after Froggy leaves Charlie to fend for himself and conflicting personalities meet. The Rev. David Marshall Lee (Thom Verratti), enlists the help of a conniving Owen Musser (Dan Seibel), to throw the "foreigner" out of town and set up a KKK empire in Tilghman County, Georgia.

Hilarity reigns as the tables are turned when Catherine Simms (Lori Mashburn) and her dimwitted brother Ellard (Dan Kett) help Betty and Charlie throw them out instead.

Kroger summed up the feelings of the cast by saying, "It was great fun. We all had a good time working together."

Other cast members were Brian Craig, Chuck Gray and Neil Propst.

Cultural

Extravaganza

Fashion! Fashion! Fashion! On Thursday, February 16, the Minority Student Organization sponsored Cultural Extravaganza '89. This program featured sixteen Taylor students modeling the latest spring fashions in five different categories: Informal Wear, Active Wear, Cross Cultural Wear, Casual Wear, and Career Wear. Along with fashion, each of the modeling segments was greatly complemented by cultural acts including dramatic readings, songs, dances, and a lip sync.

Comparable to such things as Variety Show or Nostalgia Night, the Extravaganza involved much organization, rehearsal, and commitment resulting in a fun-filled evening of entertainment. This preparation included working closely with managers of Muncie-area stores in choosing and fitting models with clothes that would give them just the right look. However, more than a show was created from all this effort. Throughout the two months of rehearsing, the students learned to work well together and a strong team spirit of cooperation was formed. The Cultural Extravaganza was educational, fun, and a time of growing for all of those involved.

Top - Kim Barnett, senior, belts out her rendition of "Running Back to You." Above - Beth Parker, freshman, shows off the latest in casual wear for women.

Nostalgia

Night

With motown scenery and a "Roll With It" theme, Nostalgia Night got the campus rockin' with a majority of sixties and early seventies tunes.

The show opened with Stephanie Wilson, Paul Merriweather and Lance Brookshire performing the theme song "Roll With It."

Some other songs performed during the night were "The 59th Street Bridge Song" by Jack Lugar and Doug Hull; "Bird is the Word" by Clyde Parker; "Night Train", a saxophone solo by Mitch Beaverson; "Let it be" by Joe Miller and Jeff Jacobson; and "R-E-S-P-E-C-T" by the women of First South English.

Throughout the show Dirk Rowley, Tom Meeks, Jeff Kiger and Jeff Jacobson tried to perform "Land of 1000 Dances."

Their first attempt was halted by Nostalgia Night coordinator Kristie Kuhnle who read from the student handbook about dancing.

Their second attempt at performing the song was interrupted by Richard Stanislaw, vice-president of academic affairs. He found the song to be aesthetically displeasing and thought it would sound better if it were performed in a "round."

The group's last attempt was stopped by Walt Campbell, dean of students. The only error he found with the song, however, was that it wasn't loud enough. Thus, the group was allowed to complete their performance. This year's core band was expanded and included a brass section of saxophones, a trumpet, trombone and tuba.

As the lights went down and the crowd filed out you could hear faint whispers of Na-Na-Na-Na...

Insurance legalities has made it necessary for Taylor University to "disassociate" itself from Wandering Wheels, a process that has been started since the summer of 1987.

After a relationship that has spanned more than 3 decades, Taylor has been advised to terminate further association with Wheels as it poses an insurance liability to the school. As reported in the Feb. 3 issue of the Echo, this means that,

"Although the two are totally separate for all practical purposes, this casual, informal relationship would allow any person filing a lawsuit against Wandering Wheels to also name Taylor in the suit, due to association."

Wandering Wheels was founded by Bob Davenport who started coaching football at Taylor University in 1958.

"I needed to supplement my income from teaching at Taylor and over the summers we would run camps for kids. I got a little disenchanted with this sort of 'sophisticated babysitting' and wanted to give them a 'guerilla-warfare' type of an experience that would change their lives spiritually and practically," said Davenport.

This inspired him to take groups out on bike trips and in 1968 officially incorporated Wandering Wheels. Through the years, the staff at Wandering Wheels has increased from two to more than ten and some of their daily routes have been the spring-break trip to Florida, the American Coast to Coast, the Perimeter trip, a trip though China and Israel and several others.

Some of these trips are planned with ministry in mind as stops are made in churches so that the group has an opportunity to share the gospel message through songs and skits.

From his experience, Davenport has pioneered his own bus, called the Possum, for use on Wheels trips. The bus holds 32 people and the seats are specially made to pull out into beds. According to Davenport, Wandering Wheels was the forerunner in the large group cycling phenomena in America. The ideas for cyclists to wear helmets and the use of a tail-flag on their bicycles while on the road originated from Davenport and his first experiences with groups.

J-term in Israel

Travelling to Israel during J-term 1989 gave many Taylor students a first hand glimpse of life in the Middle East. Since returning, many of their thoughts remain in Israel where internal political strife and clash of religions reign.

Much of the trip consisted of taking field trips everyday, walking up and down mountains, touring ancient cities (tels) and travelling to the border of Syria and Lebanon. Although the trip took the students physically away from Taylor University, it did not remove them from the responsibilities of studies. To most students the material they had to study was hard. As sophomore Jenifer Arendt puts it, "The study over there was intense, but I think it was great because we learned so much that will remain with us forever." Other students in the group recalled how impressed they were by the teaching they were given by the different professors.

"The teaching was wonderful. Our profs. knew their stuff and really did well at teaching and informing us of the Land Between," said Julie Chandler, sophomore.

Besides its educational value, the trip was also a very spiritually and physically rewarding experience.

"Without a doubt, the most rewarding part was the spiritual influence the trip had on me. Now, when I read my Bible, the stories and the places are so much more alive," said Arendt.

Others felt they could relate more to the Biblical times after seeing the sites related to the Bible.

"The physical harshness of the land gave me an understanding of what the people in the Bible had to do to survive and travel from place to place," said sophomore Karen Kraft.

Apparently the group had a taste of this "harshness." Some of the student's favorite activities ranged from hiking all the tels, seeing the historical cities and the synagogues. However, everyone's favorite besides walking up and down both paths on Masada and the wadi quilt hike, was walking from Bethany to Jerusalem. This was the road Jesus walked to and from everyday to visit Mary, Martha and Lazarus.

"I've never walked up so many steps, hiked so many mountains, or tip-toed through so many tels in my life!" said Lana Huntman.

To Michelle Gates, freshman, memories also abound. "The day we walked up to the spring of En Gedi, overlooking the Dead Sea was so beautiful. We sang, This is My Father's World, as we were climbing down the rocks. I will always remember that day when I hear that song," said Gates.

The students on the trip were also aware of the political situation.

"It was very noticeable and I've never felt so vulnerable before in my life after seeing those men carrying machine guns around all the time," said senior Shelly Fickau.

They also found it interesting to talk to some of the locals about the situation. One of the things that they noticed was that many of the Arabs were desperate for money, especially in the markets. Right before leaving for the United States, the group could sense that the uprising, or intifada seemed to be increasing and could sense fear in the people.

Being in Israel gave everyone a chance to experience the culture, geography of the land and way of life of the people. With such a variety of religions and cultures, it was hard for the students to not be affected in some way.

Youth Conference

This year over 950 conferees and sponsors were challenged to "Take A Stand" at Taylor's Youth Conference '89.

For more than 50 years, Taylor has provided a fun-filled weekend for high-schoolers to come and learn more about Jesus Christ. This year proved no different.

Dwight Robertson, the featured speaker, encouraged the youths to stand up for what they believed in and not to compromise with the influences of today. Over 20 kids responded to the altar call, asking Jesus to be Lord of their lives. Many others used this weekend to recommit themselves to Jesus Christ.

Bill Eakin, Youth for Christ area director, provided the sponsors with practical ways to help their youth as they continue their walk with God. They were kept busy with seminars given by Faye Chechowich, professor of religion; Jama Davis, Olson Hall director; Kim Johnson, English Hall director and Cairi Littlejohn, a sophomore at Taylor. The conferees gave David Meece an enthusiastic reception as he presented his message in song and personal testimony Saturday night. His selections included such favorites as Candle in the Rain, Today is the Day, and We are the Reason.

Co-chairpersons Reann Lydick and Fred Stayton, both seniors, along with the help of 47 cabinet members and over 500 student volunteers, hope to have made Youth Conference '89 a lasting memory for each person involved.

Taylathon

Taylathon celebrated its 35th year this year, the seniors (of course) winning the annual bike-a-thon and the whole campus enjoying a pretty May weekend full of events.

The race has grown in events and popularity since 1954 when President Jay Kesler brought the idea from Ball State. He points out, however, that the race itself became popular from 1959 to 1963 when Omar Young won two races as a one-man-team.

This year, the Taylathon weekend consisted of the opening ceremonies, a trike-a-thon, a scoot-a-thon, the bike-a-thon itself, an ICC cookout, a Tarzan and Jane contest, a tug of war, canoe races and closing ceremonies.

Clockwise from below - 1. The senior class winning team. 2. Rod Baccus, senior. 3. The junior team. 4. Seniors in action. 5. Rod Baccus winding a corner.

The first races, formerly on a cinder track were 100 lap events of 25 miles. In 1967 the race moved to the Taylor sidewalks, with the course going from the Maytag Gymnasium to the Reade Center, past Wengatz and back to Maytag.

The bike-a-thon, plus events which gradually became associated with it, were officially named Taylathon in 1964. Early activities included an egg toss, couples' softball, archery, coed volleyball, a pie eating contest, a hootenanny, skit, Elvis impersonators, and an ugly man contest.

Canoe races were started in 1969 and still exist, although they have been shortened to just Taylor Lake. They first started on the Mississinewa River and ended on campus. A water carnival in 1974 featured canoe relays and swimming.

More zaniness came on race week in 1985, with the inclusion of a rope swinging Tarzan and Jane contest and the Airband lip synching events.

The Taylor ladies have added their athletic efforts to the Taylathon in recent years with a trike-a-thon. This year, a scoot-a-thon was also added on race days for those less adventurous racers who like to keep one foot on the ground.

The Crucible

The story began so simply. A handful of girls dancing in the forest and, with the help of Tituba, a Barbados slave girl (Tracey Tobey, freshman), secretly conjuring up spirits of the dead.

No real harm was done until the secret was discovered and their "innermost" playfulness evoked a snowballing witch-hunt throughout the entire community.

Written during, and with reference to the McCarthy era of the 50s, Arthur Miller depicts in "The Crucible" characters who are forced to make decisions which may result in their own destruction. Naturally, this decision-making process is a divider which splits the community into those who lie, accuse and deceive for self-preservation, and those who, despite the fatal consequences, stand by their convictions, denying false allegations.

Based on real-life accounts of the Salem witch trials of 1692, Miller has preserved issues that are timeless and universal.

Taylor's production of "The Crucible" captured the real intensity of the show. Directed by Dr. Jessica Rousselow, it gripped the audience, frustrating them in helplessness as they watched Mary Warren (Heather Long, junior) buckle under the pressure of her peers, Abigail Williams (Elisabeth VarnHagen, freshman), Susanna Wallcott (Lynne Kinzer), and Mercy Lewis (Jennifer Voskuil, sophomore), forcing her to falsely point the accusing finger at John Proctor (Jack Lugar) for satanic conspiracy. Equally compelling was the scene in which Elizabeth Proctor (Valerie Flower), under the harsh questioning of Deputy-Governor Danforth (Don Hoesel, freshman), chose to violate her convictions and lie in an attempt to save the name of her husband.

These, along with the rest of the cast, presented the Taylor audience with questions not easily answered, forcing them to examine their own convictions and wrestle with their validity.

Parnassus, the literary magazine of Taylor University, publishes the best creative writing efforts of students and faculty each year.

The 1989 edition marked the first use of desktop publishing computer software that allowed the staff to completely typeset the magazine themselves. This year was also the second year to see a larger format magazine (7"x10") and the second year that Jane Huntzinger, junior, acted as editor-in-chief.

Parnassus begins each year with a literary contest judged by five faculty and staff members. Awards for first through fourth places and honorable mentions are given in the Short Story and Poetry categories. Cash prizes, funded in part by the Taylor Student Organization, are also presented to the winners.

After the winning pieces have been decided, the editorial staff then selects eighty others which will represent a broad spectrum of writers at Taylor to fill the rest of the magazine.

The magazine is printed in May and sold for the rest of the year on Taylor's campus and to alumni through the mail.

"Your secret ploys are like a villanelle"

Your secret ploys are like a villanelle
There's hidden truth within our poetry—
a repetitious game of kiss and tell that whispers lilting meter very well for someone who's as poor with words as me.
Your secret ploys are like a villanelle
that shouts above a harshly clanging bell strong sentiments of sweetest euphony.

A repetitious game of kiss and tell
will tease, intrigue, and dazzle for a spell, but when the lines are counted, all will see
your secret ploys are like a villanelle.
Your actions speak as a subtly as a yell, and all your graceful rhyme can only be a repetitious game of kiss and tell.

I'm trapped inside your strict prosodic hell tell me again how I will not go free.
Your secret ploys are like a villanelle,
A repetitious game of kiss and tell.

Elections

In the middle of March, the Taylor student body elected their student representatives for the 1989-90 school year. Students were able to cast their ballots at the Hodson Dining Commons during the lunch and dinner hours.

The two candidates running for the position of Student Body President were Kurt Hotmire and Shawn Mulder. When the votes were tabulated, Mulder came out tops.

The six main proposals that Mulder highlighted during her campaign included the possibility of an on-campus Sunday worship service, the involvement of students in the renewal of pop and candy vending machine contracts, the ability of students to build their lofts as soon as they arrive on campus, the facilitation of administrative dorm visits once a semester, the fall-break issue and the increase in students' awareness on issues affecting both the campus and the world.

The four proposals that Hotmire had hoped to initiate had he been elected to office, included the fall-break issue, the ability for bachelor of arts students to study a foreign language for a year only, a regular evaluation of all professors and a periodic survey done on alumni to discover whether or not Taylor's whole person education is effectively preparing students for the "real" world.

Other elected officials for the 1989-90 school year are:

Student Court - Matt Brummond, Brian Crabtree, Troy Felton, DeAnna Gunter and Forrest Miller.

Student Senate - Shawn Denny and Peter Vrhovnik for Morris Hall; Bill Schureman and Betsy Zehnder for off-campus housing; Dan Ross, Ken Foss and Michael Mortensen for Wengatz Hall; Laura Kirchhofer, Tica Laughner and Stephanie Golden for Olson Hall; Jackie King for Gerig Hall and Jennifer Shivers for commuters.

THE DAY BEFORE

What a relief... no more classes... no more books... no more tuition money from Dad's checkbook! Just 24 hours and we'll be graduates. 4 years of brainwrenching liberal arts classes integrating faith and learning pass before our eyes. Humming our way through graduation practice..."If you need help in pronouncing your name, see Dick!" Then it's banquet time and all our adoring administrators and faculty don their aprons and serve us, their masterpieces, one last time. The stage told the real story at the Senior Skit where Rowley kept us rolling with his Spock version of Herb or was it his Herb version of Spock? Anyway, Jacobson wobbled Jenki's axis all over the stage while Meeks' Corduan sang along. Let's not forget Dave Flood and his future scenario of how to choke on a D.C. chicken bone. Photographed memories of time gone by accompanied by Michael W. Smith's Pray for me prompts all of us to cry ourselves to sleep. -- Peggy J. Byerley

Saturday, May 20th

The weather was beautiful. They were surrounded by people who loved them and were proud of their accomplishments. For many, this was the moment they've been waiting for after four years (or more/less) of hard work. But how did they feel? Happy -- Relieved -- Sad--Confused? They probably felt all of those feelings. But worry not, dear graduates, the Lord will never leave you and He will never forsake you.

You made it! Congratulations! God bless you all and may you always cherish those memories of your days at Taylor University.

Taylor residents have had special reasons to watch both campus and international sports this year, from Jim Bushur who helped the Taylor basketball team complete an outstanding season to local Olympic skaters Kim and Wayne Seybold. The Olympians started the year's athletic entertainment as all televisions were tuned to Seoul, Korea in September for their contests. And of interest all year were athletes like, Flo Jo (Florence Griffith Joyner), who became so popular in 1989 that a doll was created in her likeness.

Bushur sets Taylor record 2,066 points

Taylor senior Jim Bushur set a Taylor and career scoring record in February with 2,066 points after earning 23 in five 3-pointers against IU southeast.

Bushur broke Forrest Jackson's career point record set from 1952 to 1956 of 2,059 points.

The senior guard and outside shooter was not alone in helping the team to a 27-8 season, however. Forwards Pete Newhouse and Dale Miller were usually in double figures along with Jay Teagle. This is the seventh year in a row that Taylor has won more than 20 games.

The Trojans ended their season in Kansas City after falling to ninth seeded Cumberland College Indians 68-50 in the first round of NAIA tournament action in Kansas City's Kemper arena.

There must be something in the fall air that brings out those Indiana football teams. Not only did the Indianapolis Colts have one of their best seasons since moving to Indiana, but the Taylor Trojans produced their best season since 1961. No team has matched this record at Taylor for the last twenty-seven years.

Under the strong leadership of head coach Jim Law, the Trojans were able to come away with a victory, not only at Homecoming, but at every single home game. The field at Jim Wheeler Stadium was a welcome sight to all of the players. The coaches and players were especially pleased with the wins they achieved over Anderson and Manchester, both long-standing rivals of Taylor. The only losses the Trojans experienced were against Franklin and De Pauw.

No team is without its right-hand man whom they know they can always count on for a strong performance and the Trojans were no exception. The announcers became very familiar with the name Mike Woods, a senior at Taylor. Woods made the most of his final season as a Trojan; he gained three rushing records. The records Woods set were for the most yards gained for a single game (339), a single season (1,321), and his career (3,150). The name Mike Woods will be closely associated with the Trojans' outstanding 8-2 season.

The 88-89 Trojans have reason to be proud of their accomplishments for the season. Only time will tell what next season will hold. The Trojans will be losing eleven seniors, but who knows what the freshman recruits will bring.

Ever since the Taylor Equestrian Club entered into region 12 of the IHSA in 1983, the club has been growing in strength each year with members who have both an interest in horses and have experiences in riding.

As Taylor University has no facilities of its own on campus, members of the club drive out to the JTL Stables located seven miles northwest of Upland during the week and practice on their horses.

Under the guidance of T.J. LeBlanc, the club's coach, team members compete against fourteen other colleges in the region of Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. Team members earn points from these competition which may qualify them for regionals, a competition where the best riders from each class is determined.

Based on performances during the regionals competition, each region then sends their best riders from every riding category to the ultimate testing ground — Nationals.

In the five years of competition, the Taylor Equestrian Club has sent three riders to Nationals; Tom Jenkinson in 1985, Phil Weber in 1987 to North Carolina, and Liz Foote in 1988 to Massachusetts.

The Trojan Kickers ended their regular season with a 10-5 record, the best season yet to be seen in the Taylor soccer program since its inception in 1983.

Beginning the season with only one senior, four juniors, and a returning coach after two years off, the obstacles facing the young team could have been overwhelming. However, with Coach Joe Lund's previous experience, he entered the season optimistic, knowing that the number of returning sophomores as well as key freshmen would add to a well-rounded team.

Lund's season goal was to make NAIA district play-offs. However, the team missed the play-offs by four points. Instead they qualified for the NCCAA single elimination tournament where they won their first game and lost the second to Cedarville College, the district champions.

No particular member could be singled out as the most valuable player. According to Lund, "Each individual contributed in a special way at different times." Noteworthy skills, however, were displayed especially by center striker, Joel Durkovic who was a high scorer and Jon Sprunger, team captain and defensive leader. Overall, the skill level of the team was higher than in past years, leading to an exceptional season.

Lund noted that the coachable attitude of the men and their commitments to God were other equally important factors that contributed to the winning season.

"There is always room for being better, but I am satisfied with the season and am anticipating making even greater gains in the future," Lund stated. Indeed, with almost the entire team returning next season, the Kickers can expect the tremendous turnaround to continue whether the record shows it or not.

Women's tennis

Internationally and on the Taylor campus, 1988 was a big year for tennis. It was the first year since 1924 that tennis was included as an official Olympic event. Olympic tennis, however, had some difficulty drawing big-name players. Most professional tennis players accustomed to earning five figures for each tournament they win could not be persuaded to play simply for the honor of their country or a gold medal. Only one of the professional male players, Sweden's Stephen Edberg, ranking top five in the world, agreed to play.

The Taylor tennis team could have a similar problem attracting players. According to NAIA Division I rules, Taylor is not allowed to offer scholarships. However, Coach Marcy Girton attracted two outstanding freshmen -- Talli-Jean Keenan and Tica Laughner for this year's team.

Coach Girton also upgraded the schedule to include three tough teams that do offer scholarships to their players -- Butler and Xavier Universities and the University of Indianapolis. The Taylor team was able to compete with all three teams, and was ahead in the match against Xavier when it was cancelled because of rain.

Girton was also pleased with the third-place finish in the 14-team District 21 tournament. This was the best finish for Taylor -- ever! Two Taylor players, the most from any one team, were named to the All-District team: Holly Seaman and Keenan. Seaman, a junior who plays at the #1 singles position, also serves as co-captain with the lone senior on the team, Sharon Erny. Laura Zorovich, a sophomore, reached the semifinals in the District tournament both in the singles and with her partner, Erny, in doubles. Freshman Katie Kroger had no losses at the #6 singles position and Gina Lucibello and Dara Stickel, both sophomores, had only one loss for the whole season, playing at #5 and #6.

The women finished the season with a 7-3 record and won 30% more games per match than last year.

The Taylor Men's Tennis team was one of the first Trojan teams to really benefit from the university's new membership in ICAC this year, as it had a third place finish behind De Pauw and Hanover in the state ICAC tournament.

Taylor officially joined the conference in the fall of 1988 on a three-year trial basis. The Trojans have been competing independently since 1984, and this year, after declining a 1987 invitation, joined the six-member conference. Other schools making up ICAC included Anderson University, De Pauw University, Franklin College, Hanover College and Wabash College.

The Trojan tennis players were unique in another way this year -- they were led by a freshman! Ken Crabbe, a freshman from Warsaw, Ind., held down the #1 singles position and made the NAIA All-District team, despite his 4-9 singles record. The remarkable freshman added up a 9-6 winning record of doubles, too, teaming up with his brother Kep, a Taylor junior. The pair made it all the way to NAIA District 21 semi-finals, and were runners-up in the ICAC tourney.

Coach Larry Winterholter was really proud of the team's 5-5 season year, and pointed out that they finished three individual matches away from an 8-2 record, as they lost three very close matches by one singles match each.

He is also very excited about the prospects for next year with his young squad, and adds that if he can "recruit solid players, we'll be a good team."

The team also finished with a fifth place in District 21 competition the highest finish they have had in four years.

Other team singles included Kep Crabb at #2, with a 7-7 record; freshman Jon Rudolph at #3, with a 6-5 season, and senior Jerry Gerig at #4 with a 6-5 tally.

Also, Kraig Binkerd, the other team senior, who held down singles #5 with a 7-4, and sophomore Jeff Anama at #6, who completed a 6-4 season. The rest of the squad, all freshmen, included Mike McGee (2-2), Nathan Dew (1-2), and Joe Imhof (3-1).

Other doubles included the

With a couple of ace Lady Trojans and a brand new coach, the Taylor Ladies' Volleyball team amassed a very comfortable 20-9 season record for the 1988-89 school year.

Coach Karen Traut left an eight-year tenure at Grand Rapids Academy to join the Lady Trojans and their nine returning letterwomen on the 11 member team.

Junior Laurel Kinzer was one of Coach Traut's not-so-secret strengths. She made NAIA All-American as a sophomore, and was an NCCAA All-American this year and NAIA Player of the Week, making the All-District team.

But one player certainly does not make a volleyball team, whose real strength is always in its unity and single-mindedness. The coach was very happy with her move and proud of the ladies; "They played well, worked hard, and had tremendous team unity," she said.

Seniors Stacey Bishop, Susan McAllister and Michelle Hollar also added greatly to the strength of the team. The team was so good that it zipped through its first seven conflicts to a 7-0 tally before being nipped 11-15, 10-15 by Tri-State.

They were also good enough to place first in three of the five tournaments they entered during the season, at Cedarville, Indiana Wesleyan, and at their own invitational. They placed third in the NCCAA districts and lost at IUPUI.

During tourney play, the Lady Trojans chalked up some powerful stats, like Kinzer's 40 kills and 16 blocks in the Indiana Wesleyan Classic. Bishop was also a tourney star at IWU, with 58 assists. And sophomore Becky Roost, not to be outdone by the more experienced upperclass ladies, was 100 percent with her serves.

The rest of the season was up and down, but mostly up. They lost to Tri-State and Franklin, then beat Oakland City before losing two more, to the University of Indianapolis and Mount St. Joseph.

A nine-game winning streak then made the plus record a certainty before two more losses to Anderson and Huntington. And although they won the next three, they ended the season with another of their losing streaks -- to Spring Arbor, Huntington, and IUPUI.

The Taylor University women's cross country team enjoyed many successes during their 1988 season. With an overall record of 31-19 and 31-7 in the NAIA, the team had every reason to feel like they had put in a strong performance.

Compared to an average turnout of twelve, Coach Ray Bullock was pleased to have twenty women to work with this year. After losing three seniors from last year's team, Bullock felt the team performed even better than his expectations.

"I was pleasantly surprised. The exciting news, though, is that ten of the twenty women are freshman and this should mean many more victories in the coming years," said Bullock.

The team placed six out of twenty at the NCCAA national meet on November 12 at Cedarville, Ohio. They also placed well at the Little State/ Big State meet at Indiana University.

Of the top ten runners, five were freshmen and only two were seniors. The Taylor University women's cross country team is off and running and is full of hope for the future.

Men's cross country

With no finish below third place and an overall record of nine losses, the Taylor University men's cross country team had an exciting 1988 season.

The men's hard work in the off-season definitely paid off. While their goal was to finish in the top ten, Coach Chris Coy felt the overall performance of the men was better than expected even though they finished in the top twenty.

Since five of the seven top runners had never run before, lack of experience was an important factor in the team's performance.

The team participated in the NCCAA meet at Cedarville, Ohio, on November 12 and finished third out of twenty. They also qualified to compete at the NAIA national meet in Wisconsin.

"My expectations were definitely met at each of the meets," commented Coy. With five of the top eight runners returning next season, expectations should continue to be met.

Women's basketball

Like the men's basketball team at Seton Hall, the women's basketball team at Taylor had an exceptional season this year. Their eighteen wins made 1988-89 the first winning season since 1983-84.

Two of the eighteen wins were in the National Christian College Athletic Association (NCCAA) tournament. Although this tournament ended in a disappointing 63-62 loss to Cedarville College, the team members' attitudes remained positive. According to coach Marcy Girton, "They never got down even when we lost a close game."

The National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) led to another disappointment in the playoffs with a 57-46 loss to Oakland City College, but the NAIA also played a part in the highlight of the season for the Trojans. The Taylor team, who had been featured every week in the NAIA bulletin, was ranked tenth among NAIA schools nationally for defense. This was after allowing an average of only 56 points per game.

These accomplishments were a fitting end to the Taylor basketball career of senior captain Christa Snyder. A very dedicated player, Snyder played in all but one of the 116 games during her four years with the team. The season was also a good one for Rachel Haley, who as a freshman, was the top vote-getter for the NCCAA district 3 Most Valuable Player.

This kind of performance and dedication by the entire team is what made the season successful. Sophomore Cathy Ryan felt that it was all "a lot of work, but worth it."

One look at the Trojan's 1988-89 achievements is proof that it was indeed worth it!

Men's basketball

Although winning is generally a lot more fun and satisfying, it's often as a result of the losses that one learns the most. The 1988-89 Taylor men's basketball team found this to be true. After coming off a disappointing finish the season before, the Trojans learned from their mistakes and produced a fine record of 27-8.

"I believe our down times this season prepared us for our strong finish," said head coach Paul Patterson.

A highlight of the season was the individual performance by senior Jim Bushur. Bushur put in his best season at Taylor as he broke Forest Jackson's record of 2,059 career points set in 1953—scoring leader at Taylor. Jim finished up the season with 2,211 career points. He was also an NAIA scholar athlete for the second year in a row and was an All-American Honorable Mention. Jim's contribution to the team will be missed next season.

However, Jim was not the only leader on the team. He was greatly assisted by juniors Jay Teagle, Scott Dean and Ryan Sorrell.

Coach Patterson, who is assisted by coaches Mike Springer and Mike Row, has high hopes for next season. He believes they can be an even better team. The team has a good shot at a strong season with only losing one senior. Coach Patterson believes the team can perform well as long as they return having improved.

As far as key games were concerned, Coach Patterson considered the losses most important because of the way the guys responded to them. As a result of learning through their losses, the team was able to end up strong. As long as the Trojans continue to learn from their mistakes, they should be a fine team.

Women's Track

The women's track team has shown definite improvement over the season, coming from a fifth place finish at the Huntington Relays to a triumphal victory at the NAIA District #21 Championships.

The team was led with record-setting performances by freshman Carrie Boyd in the 200m (26.1), sophomore Jen Scott in the 100m (12.75) and senior Susan McAllister in the javelin (134' 10.00").

There were many highlights and personal bests set during the season. At the meet against Huntington College the women pulled out a win in the last event (1600m relay - 4:11.5) to overtake Huntington and win the meet.

Many firsts were achieved during the District meet held at Taylor. Scott was the only double winner with victories in the 100m and 200m. McAllister placed first in the javelin (127' 2.00"), senior Marcia Walker placed first in the long jump with a 16'6" jump, senior Teresa Veach placed first in the 400m low hurdles (1:06.9) and sophomore Shannon Warfield placed first in the 100m hurdles (15.7).

Boyd, Warfield, Scott and McAllister were named as NCCAA All-Americans at the NCCAA Championship meet.

Men's Track

The men's track team struggled through an unsteady season this year. It was, however, led by some experienced runners like juniors Paul Merriweather and Kevin Roth.

Merriweather was the only first-place winner for the men at the NAIA District 21 Championships and gained a first in the long jump (22 - 5.25).

He was named NAIA All District 21, All-Conference ICAC second team and NCCAA All American for the long jump.

Also named to the All-Conference ICAC team was Roth for the steeplechase and freshman Bryant Steans for the 100 m.

First year coach Karen Trout led her 13-women team to a 12 and 14 season record. With six first time players, both coach and players began the season with optimism and enthusiasm, with hopes of improving the team record of previous years.

During spring break in Florida, the team played at an annual Christian College Tournament. The ladies not only returned to Taylor after a week of fun, but also with a prestigious third place in the tournament.

Senior Jane Canze led the team in batting with a 392 average. Jill Richmond, a sophomore was not too far behind with a 333 batting average. No particular player greatly excelled over the others, according to Coach Trout who was satisfied with the skills and abilities of her ladies.

In spite of a few injuries, one of which took starting left-fielder Heide Crutchfield, junior, out with a sprained ankle, the team finished up strong with two 7-0 victories over Bethel.

Baseball

The Taylor baseball team consisted of a younger group of students this year as more than half of the players were freshmen.

The team performed well, however, with a 4 and 8 record in the ICAC, a new conference that was formed this year while defeating DePauw in a double-header, one of the highlights of the season.

The two top hitters were freshmen Kyle Haas (.352) and Dave Herschberger (.317) while Paul Newitt, junior, and Dennis Hewitt, sophomore made #3 and #4 hitter respectively. Haas was also named to the All-Conference team as a second baseman. Jeff Atkinson ended the season with a noteworthy 6 and 2 pitching record.

Golf

The Taylor men's golf team welcomed five new members for the 1989 season. Their contributions complemented consistent performances by the returning starters.

Todd Hardy, junior, won medalists honors at the Huntington Invitational, while the team won its first tournament. A week later, at the ICAC tournament in Terre Haute, the team placed fourth, but freshman Dan Ross and Dan Dupon, sophomore, qualified for the All-Conference team. The team then traveled to Grace College and returned home with its second first-place finish.

Another first-place finish at the Anderson Invitational followed by two second-place finishes at the NCCAA tournament and Goshen Invitational signified the return of competitive golf at Taylor.

The overall record of 66-21 has given golf coach Joe Romine much to look forward to in 1990. All starters will be returning with the exception of graduating senior Pete Setian.

The golf team sends with Pete their best wishes and congratulations for being such a valued team member.

Groups and Clubs

John Donne, in Meditation XVII, wrote: "No man is an island, entire of itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a part of the main." As Christians we can admit from experience that we are interdependent--we do need each other. It is this innate desire for fellowship that encourages us at Taylor to combine knowledge and abilities, to pool interests and resources, and accomplish as a group what we cannot accomplish as mere individuals.

Wandering Wheels have provided many a student with the adventures of the outdoors on bicycles. A great way to learn endurance, discipline and appreciate the comforts of home. Above - The zany Wandering Wheels staff!

Mass Media Activities

Radio. Television. Newspaper. Yearbook. These four make up the Taylor-based, student-run media, each in their own way sharing the news, entertainment, and memories of the year. This year, radio station WTUC, under the management of junior Bill Hatfield, rocked the airwaves with a wide array of Christian music and challenged us with call-in, quick-win trivia games and drawings. In the video mode, Mel Valdez and the crew at WTVT kept us informed and entertained with shows hosted by such campus celebrities as David Flood, Wally Campbell, and Alyson Forbes Flynn. Journalistically, editor Jenny Blum coordinated the Echo Staff, producing the high caliber reporting of such stories as the death of Milo Rediger, Homecoming, the Wengatz Spring Break-In, the ongoing VCR saga, as well as the campus' favorite weekly columnist, Dirk Rowley. Finally, as she quietly worked on preparations for a wedding, Pam Teo, editor of the Ilium, worked with (and sometimes without) a staff of layout designers, copy writers, photographers, and others to create the beautiful and memory-filled yearbook of which you are now partaking.

The 1989 Germany team - (L-R) Kira Rucker, Juanita Yoder, Prof. Bill Heth, Alyson Flynn, Jeff Unruh, Brett Means, Kurt Holmire.

Student Outreach

Within the Taylor community a significant number of people subscribe to the belief that God's truth should be openly shared with those in the world who do not know Christ as their Savior. One such method employed by our campus is that of short-term missions projects. With much preparation and prayer, students are trained under such groups as Lighthouse and World Christian Fellowship, and challenged to share testimony through song, drama, compassion, and love. This year Taylor sent teams to England, the Bahamas, Jamaica, Germany, Ecuador, and Singapore during Interterm, Spring Break and Summer.

"So you're the Executive Assistant Vice-President to the Academic Board of Interior Student Leadership Housing Affairs and Development..." Despite some job descriptions, the faculty and administration at Taylor consists of much more than "big shots" with fancy titles who remain fairly distant, and concern themselves only with facts and figures. They are individuals who, after seeking God's will, have chosen to work at an average-paying Mid-Western Christian Liberal-Arts College surrounded by cornfields; men and women who have sacrificed in order to focus their talents, abilities and knowledge toward the quality education of you and me. Sometimes we misunderstand or don't comprehend them, or are even ignorant to the many decisions made on our behalf. However, as "members of one body," the combination of their efforts help to form one big picture - the integration of faith and learning - and serve as an example of unselfish service.

For the love of each other...

"For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be united to his wife, and they will become one flesh." As Genesis 2:24 points out, with marriage, a couple becomes one, not only in the physical sense, but also through the combining of personalities, interests, and talents. Ron and Chicako

Sloan represent such a combination as they complement each other through culture as well as the creativity within their unique musical talents. As Mary Ellen Rothrock, guest writer in issue 17 of The Echo stated, "The Sloans are duo pianists, and, during the five and a half years of their marriage have performed recitals together in the United States and Japan. They are grateful God brought them together as pianists as well as husband and wife." This year has been filled with excitement for the Sloans as their first baby, Naomi, was born in December. Also, on March 15, they were featured as duo pianists with the Fort Wayne Philharmonic in the Rediger Auditorium. Although it is admittedly often challenging, Ron and Chicako Sloan have found in their commitment to promote each other's talent, a relationship of encouragement and love.

Faculty & Fun

Student activities are for students, right? WRONG! As many have shown us, professors also like to get in on the action sometimes as they present their not-so-academic sides through unforgettable performances. Who could possibly forget Walt Campbell's and Dr. Stanislaw's interpretive cameos during "Land of a Thousand Dances" in Nostalgia Night? Or Youth Conference Oompa-Loompas Leon Adkison, Dwight Mikkelsen, Mark Cosgrove and Jim Coe and Conferee parents Walt Campbell and Jane Taylor. There are some, like Marilyn Evans in the senior-skit, who bring their real-life adventures to the stage. There are others who participate with almost an addictive readiness, like Mark Cosgrove who, along with oomp-loompa-ing, participated in Homecoming, Airband, and even brought his family dressed in pajamas, to enjoy a D.C. Christmas celebration with Jay and Janie Kesler and the rest of campus. With such fun faculty participation, our daily, and often routine lives are enhanced by the knowledge that the quite proper and professional speaker at the head of the class is human enough to wear green hair, pajamas, or even associate himself with anything containing the word "dance."

Despite the fact that you may not have ever really known her, Mattie "Flash" Sellers, secretary to five Taylor presidents over the past 22 years, retired this year and will be missed. Nicknamed "Flash" for her love of taking pictures with an instamatic, Mattie, in a most courteous and helpful manner, helped maintain order and organization within the president's office. Can you imagine Jay trying to manage his own datebook filled with luncheons, chapels, and an incomprehensible amount of speaking engagements without someone to keep it all straight. "Behind every successful man, is a successful woman," is a saying most often applied to married couples. A Taylor version might read, "Behind every successful president, is a successful secretary like Mattie Sellers."

People

"Who are the people in your neighborhood..?" This phrase from a Sesame Street song evokes within many of us the childhood memories of learning about careers, occupations, titles and hobbies. In essence it has helped to teach us about the interests and endeavors of others and how they affect us. This People section, filled with pictures of those whom you've come to know, love and appreciate as well as famous personalities (represented on this page) who may have affected the world around you, attempts to involve a similar learning process. As you reminisce, think about how these people have changed your life!

John Houseman, Professor Kingsley, dies at 86

He was born Jacques Haussmann in Bucharest, Romania in 1902 and became adept in acting, directing and producing. John Houseman, as he came to call himself, was well-known for his role as Professor Charles W. Kingsfield in "The Paper Chase" series, a role which won him an Oscar. Houseman's talent and versatility, however, has also brought him fame as the producer of Orson Welles' radio drama, "War of the Worlds," co-writer of "Citizen Kane," and acting coach for such big names as Kevin Kline, Robin Williams, Christopher Reeves and others.

John Houseman died of spinal cancer this year at the age of 86 in his seaside home in Malibu, California. He is survived by his wife, Joan and sons John Michael and Charles Sebastian.

Talk show host Oprah Winfrey loses 67 pounds in four months.

Can you imagine dreaming of being skinnier and acheiveing it? Talk show host Oprah Winfrey lost 67 pounds in four months and now fits into a size 10 jeans. She follows a liquid protein diet, exercises and also under-goes counseling. Winfrey attributes her success in dieting to the inspiration she received from a friend's husband who lost 75 pounds in 12 weeks.

Taylor's Unsung Heroes

If asked to name a few student leaders on Taylor's campus, it is relatively easy to comprise a list of those who are often seen in the limelight for a variety of activities. However, Taylor is more than a calender of social events for the overcommitted. It's people. People helping people. People volunteering their time and effort to stand up (or sit down) for a cause that they believe in.

On Friday, April 21, three Taylor University students made their way to the Fort Wayne Women's Health Organization Inc. Senior Heidi Newhouse, sophomore Kevin Vanderbrink and junior Steve Wolfe found out what it was like to be part of an anti-abortion protest. It was an experience even at the risk of arrest. But why, you may ask? This is because they are people who are willing to make a sacrifice. People seeking knowledge and truth who travel outside the spotlight of glory to teach, share, learn and grow. People to help communicate the Gospel in the dramatics of real life. People who make us think. People who make us wish we didn't have to. But whether we realize it or not, each one of these people is vitally significant. And one of these people can be you!

"Augh, get me out of here!"

This desperate plea is not an uncommon expression among Taylor students. Despite quality programming of on-campus student activities, many of us have gone through a period of over-saturation during which we need to leave campus and rekindle that outer-awareness -- the realization that there is a real world beyond the Bell Tower. It usually doesn't take much -- a movie, a Newt's burger, a road-trip to Indy -- but it is ever-so-helpful in gaining a fresh perspective and breaking out of the monotonous rut which we often dig in our routine of daily life.

W. R. Rediger

W. R. Rediger was a pivotal person in Taylor's history since World War II, perhaps even in the 20th century. W. R. Rediger, a native of Taylor, was a member of the recently published Taylor University series of books. Rediger and author of the recently published Taylor University series of books, a collection of the men who grew with the university from a depression-age college to a world-class institution, was a man who traveled world-wide for Taylor and fill the pulpit of the Taylor University Church.

Rediger died on Friday, Oct. 14 following a heart attack the day before. His friends and loved ones gathered for a memorial service in his namesake auditorium on Oct. 15.

Rediger was born in 1913. The "shy farm boy," as he described himself, began his career at Taylor in 1935.

At present he has served the university for all but six years of his life. He received his masters and doctoral degrees at New York University before coming to Taylor in 1943.

He served as Taylor's academic dean for 18 years, a vice president for 11 and President of Taylor University from 1965-75 and from 1979-81. Between presidencies, he was Chancellor of Taylor University in name only. He continued to work, writing his memoirs, pastoring his church, and serving the university in numerous capacities in retirement. His memoirs, My Life at Taylor, tell his growth from farmer to philosopher to administrator as he served Taylor.

He is survived by his wife, Velma; two sons, Nelson and Wesley; two sisters, Freda and Mary; and four grandchildren.

John Coffey

John Baxter Coffey
Born: March 4, 1968
Died: July 18, 1988

John died in a motorcycle accident in Charlotte, N.C. He was the son of Joseph Coffey. He is survived by his parents, Joan and Robert Coffey of Geneva, Ill., and Joseph Coffey. He had completed his first year of studying psychology and Biblical literature. He also participated in the Butman's Homecoming.

John was an exciting person to be around. He could give you more love to John than that. He cared deeply for others, trying to give them rare love and concern for people. He was honest, open and stood up for others to examine their own beliefs and caused them to grow. He was a true friend, a caring person and a dedicated Christian. That was John.

About the book...

This 200-page annual was "assembled" by a great many people, each having their own personality. The book also possesses a unique personality brought about by consistent use of certain elements. The font used for copy was Times 10 point for the "Activities" section and 12 point for "Athletics" Captions were done mainly in Helvetica 8 or 6 point. The only exception occurred in the faculty and administration section where Times 6 point was used instead.

New Century Schoolbook 48 point bold was employed to introduce each section and also for headlines (some of them) on the division pages. Other fonts were also used for headlines but will not be mentioned here as they will only occupy unnecessary space.

Most of the pictures were taken by students who had the talent and/or simply the interest in photography. However, there were a dozen or so pictures that were generously given to the Ilium by Jim Garringer, the Taylor University campus photographer. These include group shots of the various athletic groups and several scenery shots.

Would like to say, "Hope you've enjoyed reading the book as much as we had putting it together," but it wouldn't be exactly true to make such a statement! Happy reminiscing!

The end.

Special thanks to...

Larry Glaze (Herf Jones representative) and Jim Garringer.

To my staff...

Thank you for taking the time to do all that writing, lay-out and picture-taking.

Thank you, Kathy, for being so helpful in almost all areas of the year-book. You were one very valuable staff-member of the Ilium --an indispensable one! And to you, Randy, thank you for being such a great photographer. There were many ideas that you had and good things that you did for the yearbook that I was not aware of until later in the year. For those, I also thank you for them. Your contribution was absolutely vital to the Ilium and is deeply appreciated.

To Karen Owen, yearbook adviser extraordinaire, I am grateful to you for many things. Listing them all down would take more space than this page would allow. Thank you for everything, Karen.

To the 17 or more people who helped bring this book to its completion -- congratulations, we did it!
